Open the E-I-P page in the elements.com website by clicking the "Elements" tab at the bottom of the page (upper left) and selecting "Photoshop Elements 12". This page contains all the information you'll need to know about the new features and changes in Photoshop Elements 12. Photoshop Elements 12 vs. Photoshop Photoshop Elements 12 is a free, streamlined version of the older Photoshop. Elements is not a replacement for Photoshop. Both are complete programs in their own right that are designed for high-resolution graphics manipulation, though Photoshop is the most widely used image editing program. Photoshop Elements 12 brings all the features of the Adobe Creative Cloud version to the simple Mac and Windows interfaces of the regular Photoshop program. What's New in Photoshop Elements 12? Elements now supports two new exciting features: Adobe Premiere Clip and Adobe After Effects. Premiere Clip offers an in-app editing, manipulating, preview, and exporting capability for photos, video, and graphics. After Effects allows you to create a variety of video effects, such as composites, motion graphics, titles, transitions, and more. These two features will make your life easier and give you more professional-looking images, videos, and graphics. But if you're already happy with Photoshop Elements' capabilities, you'll find that even more tweaks and features are now available for both editing and design. For more information, see Overview of Photoshop Elements 12 for Designers and Photographers. Apple only allows Photoshop to be installed on macOS systems. Photoshop Elements 12 is not available on Windows PCs. However, you can run Photoshop Elements 12 on a Mac. We recommend using a Mac, if you want to use Photoshop Elements 12. Photoshop Elements 12.1 Released Photoshop Elements 12.1 is available now. Photoshop Elements 12.1 adds new features to both Photoshop Elements and Photoshop CS5, including major changes to interface and performance. It also features new features for the collection of files that E-I-P can import and export to. If you purchase a subscription to the new Creative Cloud, you can edit, manipulate, or design files with Photoshop Elements 12.1. If you don't, Photoshop Elements 12.1 comes free to download as part of the Adobe Premier Clip video editor and Adobe

After Effects graphics and video editor. If you use Premiere Clip or After Effects, you'll need to uninstall the current version before installing Photoshop a681f4349e

Q: Why does my RecyclerView get multiple instances of an item for every item in the view? I've created a RecyclerView with a GridLayoutManager. I have a RecyclerView.Adapter that is created with a DiffUtil.Callback. I have one BaseAdapter that is used for the list of items. It is also a view holder, that uses a DiffUtil.Callback to manipulate a DiffSet. As an example, the helper method below is being called inside of DiffUtil.onChanged in the Adapter. protected void updateRecyclerView(long id) { List diffSet = mDiffCallback.getDiffSet(); for (Item item : diffSet) { if (item.getId() == id) { ItemViewHolder holder = mItemViewHolderMap.get(id); holder.update(item); } } } My problem is that the view holder seems to be created for every item in the list, even though this is not the case. Hence, when my diffSet is changed, the DiffUtil.Callback loop runs for each Item in the list, calling the DiffUtil.Callback.onChanged for each item, creating a new view holder for every item, rather than just one view holder for all items. This is a problem, because the ID of each item is the same. It means that when the view holder has updated an item in the list, I will have multiple view holders of the same item. The DiffUtil.Callback then runs once again, creating another new view holder, and so on. Hence, the onChanged callback runs multiple times with the same item. Is there a way to make it so that only one view holder is created for each item in the list? A: This is due to the fact that the adapter was not properly initialised (which is quite common). When diffSet is empty, you still have the reference to the first element of the diffSet, even though you have no items in the view. You can verify this by calling diffSet.size(). Since it is always 0, you will always have the
