prototype 3 free download prototype 3 free download pc game full versionQ: How can I run a function when my python code starts? import threading def func(): print "I work in my first thread" time.sleep(2) print "I work in my second thread" time.sleep(2) print "I work in my third thread" time.sleep(2) class MyClass(): @staticmethod def func(): print "I am in the original class" A = MyClass() B = MyClass() t1 = threading.Thread(target=A.func) t2 = threading.Thread(target=B.func) t1.start() t2.start() while True: pass So, I want A and B to share the same func function. However, each of them have their own func function. How can I make sure both of them are executed at once? Basically I want it to look like this: while True: for func in A.func and B.func: func() A: Use the threading.Thread.run() method instead of the Thread.start(). class MyClass(): def func(self): print "I work in the original class" class Test(MyClass): def func(self): print "I work in the Test class" A = MyClass() B = MyClass() t1 = threading.Thread(target=A.func) t2 = threading.Thread(target=B.func) t1.start() t2.start() # If you want to wait until both threads finish before ending the # program #t1.join() #t2.join() # If you want to run the functions in parallel #t1.start() #t2.start() while True: t1.run() t
