A reluctant King and his young son named prince Rama are attacked by the demon named Puli. When Rama dies from the injury, King Vishwakarma realizes that his son is in danger of dying too. He and his wife, Lakshmi, start looking for Rama and they come to the valley where they witness a dramatic battle between Rama and Puli with Puli being proclaimed the winner. Vishwakarma's wife Lakshmi decides to travel in search of her son and leaves him in the care of a hermit. Meanwhile, the sadistic demon Thorn, who was really Ravana's disciple, seeks revenge on his master. Ravana sends his loyal demon servant Kali, to attack Vishwakarma. But Vishwakarma sends his wife back to take care of his kingdom while he undertakes a time travelling journey to save Rama from the demon. A young prince from Ayodhya, named Rama, has been sent to the Palace of King Dasarath in Ayodhya, where he has to take the place of his father, King Dasarath, who has died. But instead of attending to his kingdom affairs, the King starts getting interested in a drama which is performed only by women. One day, Rama witnesses a drama, which is actually a power struggle between four families - the king's family, the king's generals, the officials, and the nymphs. The wives start playing a vital role in the power struggle and try to take control over the kingdom and kill each other. After witnessing this drama, Rama comes to know that he will be the next king of the kingdom and his father's plan will be fulfilled. However, he realizes that he is not as strong as his father and his brothers to take over the kingdom. When Rama informs the king about what he had seen, he does not pay any heed to his son's words. Later, while going for a bath, Rama finds a dagger in the bathtub. Knowing this, his father thought that someone has come to kill him and has sent Rama to a different palace. While Rama is preparing for his marriage, he sees his bride and tries to come close to her to talk to her. But she runs away from him. Rama is confused and goes back to the palace to ask about his bride. The king says to Rama that he does not have any bride and gives another
