a web development company and we use a VPS to host our web applications. In my company we are using around 100 VPS. Every time we make any changes to the server we have to pay out to the provider. This has increased our power consumption.

Are we paying a lot or is the power consumption of a VPS affected by the number of CPUs? A: Power consumption for a typical VPS is not directly related to the number of CPUs. Power consumption is (in normal cases) defined by the number of instances running as well as (potentially less important) CPU/RAM limits, which are usually a lot higher than the number of physical CPUs. The CPU usage (and thus power) of a typical VPS is also not necessarily related to the number of instances running. If the resources are not well utilized, the power consumption may be reduced even though the number of instances is rising. Q: Generate new row with Rest API I'm developing a web app and i want to include the task of generating a new row. I'm going to use AngularJS and flask. So, as a general approach, this is my plan: 1 - I'll generate an api call with angularJS. 2 - The api call will be called by flask and it will have a post action. 3 - In the post action I'll generate 3e33713323
