it wasn't really a competition. The only other possibility is that the exhibitors didn't participate but it's hard to believe that the majority of the contractors on the site couldn't send their best workers. Many of the women are wearing the traditional Islamic dress – a hijab or other headgear that covers the hair and the neck. A vest that goes over the top buttoned to the neck is often worn. The women – the veiled may be of any age or race – are taking their places on the street as if in the centre of a lane leading to the holy places. For many years all that has stood in the way of the Damascus Road walk has been the hundred-metre width of highway that separates Damascus from Lebanon. The imposing wall that stretches out from the Damascus Gate in the Old City has essentially cut off any traffic other than pedestrian traffic and tourists. Now all that has changed. Another wall has been built facing the Old City to house the expanding numbers of visitors as well as to protect Israel from the daily shelling from the nearby Palestinian refugee camps. But that wall has a second purpose, to turn the Old City's main road into an open-air pedestrian mall. This section of what has come to be known as the Damascus Road walk was opened last week. The road is still being blocked off in various places and there are still huge cranes and other construction equipment to remove for later transport to the new high-rises to be built in Jerusalem's new west. But the work is proceeding and the street, which is under the control of the government-run al-Waqf, the Islamic trust that manages and profits from the Old City, is lined with granite cobblestones, lined with shops, restaurants and cafes, and most importantly, lined with the city's electric sellers, who come out with the green-plastic containers to fill up on power. Today, visitors can enter the Damascus Road walk and continue down towards the Old City wall. They pass checkpoints that set limits on the number of people who may enter the Old City itself. Down on the newly laid-out promenade, under the shade of the gigantic eucalyptus trees planted along the road, the people are beginning to gather. It's all very orderly and controlled, as befits a visit to holy ground. The customers come in groups of two or three, and every group is

--- abstract: 'The notion of invariant sets and semi-static control was introduced in [Kurzanski2017a; Kurzanski2017] in order to treat robot motion planning problems with constraints in time that are of the form “dynamical constraints”. In this paper we give a survey of these notions with the aim of showing that what one might call “home” for the concept of invariant sets is also home for that of semi-static control; in the latter case one looks for controls of the form  $\dot{x}(t)=Kx(t)+w(t)$  and the function  $x(t)$  is the state trajectory and  $w(t)$  the feedback control. Finally, we give a number of examples taken from [Kurzanski2017; Kurzanski2017a; Kurzanski2017b].' author: - 'Petr Kurzanski' bibliography: - 'src/biblio.bib' title: 'A survey of invariant sets and semi-static controls' --- [1]: Department of Mathematics and Systems Analysis, Aalto University, 0191 Finland (E-mail: petr.kurzanski@aalto.fi) Vasomotor symptoms associated with tamoxifen and placebo in postmenopausal women with breast cancer. To determine whether tamoxifen reduces the incidence of vasomotor symptoms in women with breast cancer compared with placebo, we conducted a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled trial. A total of 322 women aged 50 to 76 years were randomly assigned to receive either 20 mg of tamoxifen twice daily for 2 years or placebo for a similar period. At the end of 2 years, the actuarial rate of vasomotor symptoms (hot flushes and night sweats) was significantly lower in the tamoxifen group than in the placebo group ( $P=.006$ ). Tamoxifen reduced the occurrence of vasomotor symptoms by 54% compared with placebo, with a median time to the first occurrence of symptoms of 6 months for the placebo group and 13 months for the tamoxifen group ( $P=.006$ ). The Kaplan-Meier method showed a time-dependent association between tamoxifen and the occurrence of vasomotor symptoms. Tamoxifen had an effective antiestrogenic action at reducing vasomotor
