My code is as follows: a = "only the underline" b = "unicode \u00a9" match = a.gsub(b, "#{b}") puts match Expected output: only the underline Actual output: only the underline A: Because it's doing it by character. If the string starts with a Latin-1 character you will get the full match, if it starts with a Unicode character you will get only the Latin-1 part. If you want it to be all underline, then you should probably use `gsub("\u009F", "#{b}")`.
