I have two buttons in the footer of the slide to show the start and end of the slideshow. I have coded it so that when the start or end button is clicked, if there is a slide show currently playing, then change the URL to show the next one in the slide show, and then start playing. This works fine when the start or end button is clicked, but when I click the button to start a slideshow, there is no code in the code behind file to tell PowerPoint to play the slideshow, so it doesn't change the URL and cause the slideshow to start. I have tried code to start a slideshow when the button is clicked (see below) but that doesn't work

You can download the full version of the £1.50 Android app from the Apple Store or Google Play Store or it can be. Endurance vs Recruitment Two-man crews on the trail, but only one goal. Being assigned a rotation for a function like firefighting is a very different process than being assigned a role in a cross-country relay. Endurance athletes are often looking for the fastest, most efficient mode of transportation in terms of health, speed, and performance. The drawback is that they can't take much gear, and they can't be relied upon for long periods of time. The other option is to assign a team of people to be your "runners," or support crew. Running, especially multi-day distances, requires advanced planning and training of physical stamina. In these situations, you want to have in place and ready to go at a moments notice a complete team who can provide your team with what they need (from warm clothes to food). The support team needs to be trained for technical and logistical support - knowing when to do what to keep you safe, fed, and warm, keeping the team going in the right direction, and giving you the tools you need to get the job done. It's no surprise that there's a difference in mindset between endurance athletes and those who are out for recruitment. "I always wondered why people do these types of races. Now I know." - Jakob Reese, Washington Center Relay Runner

Beyond the important physical differences, you need to consider personality differences when it comes to recruiting your support crew. An endurance athlete is probably going to be looking for someone they can rely on, or at least trust to be organized and reasonable in a crisis. Someone who can run for at least 90 minutes is going to be looking for support team members who can keep up and do a better job supporting them. Someone who is trying to recruit someone will be looking for a candidate who wants to join a group of people and be part of a team. Roles Before you go looking for a support team member, you will need to decide what type of team you want. Co-ed teams can run together or separate. There is no "right" size, but you might want to consider some things before you run out and start "recruiting" candidates.
