Adobe Stock is a stock photo library with over 2.4 million royalty-free stock photographs and illustrations. You can use its powerful search tools to find an image that matches your project. I regularly spend time searching to find an image that matches my need. But Adobe Stock solves this problem for me. Adjust the size, transparency, and opacity of an image using the adjustment tool. Work with layers and apply different adjustment filters. It's a great way to find and download a photo for free. While there are some free software packages that may be able to do this, adjusting an image on the fly is certainly not as straightforward as it would be if you can do so in Photoshop. Q: Connect the following equations The following is a question from a textbook. I'm just stuck on it. I also tried drawing a scatter plot and I don't really know how it could help in answering the question. A: Good guess! The equation is asking to find x, y , for the point with coordinates $(x, \frac{y}{2})$. Since the equation is a plane, the system should be able to be solved by setting the two co-ordinates equal to one another. Which gives: $x = \frac{y}{2}$. Plug that into the other equation, and you get the line: $x^2 - 2y^2 + 1 = 0$ To find all the x, y pairs that lie on the line, you want to find the roots of the above equation. First, find the discriminant of the quadratic equation: $\Delta = 4y^2 - 4$. It is positive when y is between $-1/2$ and $1/2$. Second, it is easy to find where these x, y pairs are: $x = \pm \sqrt{\Delta} = \pm \frac{1}{2} \sqrt{4y^2 - 4} = \frac{y}{2}$ You can also write the equation in terms of x, y : $x^2 - \frac{1}{2}y^2 + 1 = 0$ as the vertical line between the points: $(x, y), (x, -y/2)$. Q: A packet sent through the Raspberry Pi's WLAN is being discarded I have two Raspberries Pi3 with the same firmware and the same OS. Both configured with WLAN. The first Raspberry Pi is set as Server and the second is configured as Client. The client is set to only communicate with the server and tries to connect to the specified IP to establish a TCP connection. The client successfully establishes a connection to the server, it detects the "client" role of the server but I don't receive any "ACK" packet. After some retries I tried to send a ping packet from the client to the server and the server should send a "Pong" response back to the client. But the packet is discarded by the server.
