itoon v1.2.8 final serial key.Motorway tolls could rise despite spending cuts Toll charges could rise on some roads across England as budget cuts mean that money being raised on the cashless highways will be reduced. The Department for Transport (DfT) has confirmed that there will be "cliffs" after this financial year, meaning the brakes will be put on spending and no new roads will be built unless money is added, or cashless roads lose revenue. The proposals have been slammed by the general secretary of the union, Dave Ward, and others, including the National Roads Federation, as fundamentally unfair. In a statement this week, DfT principal secretary, Stephen Clarke, said: "The cashless highway charge will act as a hard cap on new road projects. There will be an excess of capital receipts after the financial year ending in March 2014 and a shortfall in the year ending in March 2015. This is because the cashless highway charge is currently a fixed fee for all users, whereas the cost of building, maintaining and financing new roads is dependent on usage." He said it was also "important that the cashless highway charge is sustainable in the long-term". In January, the DfT published a white paper on road funding, which proposes capping spending on new roads in England from £20bn to £10bn by 2015, and the level of cash raised from the cashless highway charge would be cut from £1.5bn to £1bn. It also said that the government would no longer be able to build new roads using tax and borrowing, and would have to be "cash neutral" from 2015 onwards. Last week, the Roads Minister, Chris Skidmore, said: "We are determined to maintain the highway network. No amount of money will ever compensate for the amount of traffic jams caused by decades of underinvestment." The Road Haulage Association has expressed concerns that cashless highways will lead to more road traffic and more delays. Dave Ward, general secretary of the Road Haulage Association, said: "We need more investment in roads and we need it now. It is vital that the government recognise that this is a short-term solution to a long-term problem and invest in long-term roads solutions that minimise congestion while delivering the most reliable, high quality road network that people and businesses need. "Yet, in return for this cash
