MDB Viewer Plus is a small, yet highly reliable utility designed to open and manipulate Access files. By providing such simple means to view, edit and search MDB and Accdb database records, it's an easy alternative to Microsoft Access. View and edit MDB files without having Access installed The market is saturated with database viewers and managers and one popular choice is Microsoft Access. The latter is aimed at software architects that are involved in developing applications based on large and complex datasets. While there is no arguing in the fact that it provides a comprehensive architecture in this respect, Microsoft does not provide a free tool for viewing the databases. MDB Viewer Plus compensates this need and offers a very simple way to view databases created with Microsoft Access. Please note that it is not a replacement for Access, but an alternative to view MDB files without installing or purchasing Microsoft's product. Manage the database content with this portable application MDB Viewer Plus is a portable application, which means you can carry it on a removable drive and run it from there without affecting the system registry. Even though Microsoft Access is not a requirement, the app relies on the Data Access Component (MDAC) in order to successfully be launched and perform tasks. The interface is simple, yet very well organized, with all of its functions encased in a few menus that are easy to navigate through. The list of features includes possibilities to edit, search and sort database contents, as well as to create new databases and add, insert or remove tables. In addition, MDB Viewer Plus is able to generate SQL query statements and to set or change existing database passwords. Furthermore, the files can be exported to various formats, including TXT, HTML, XMLL, DBF, PDF, RTF, CSV, etc. A viewer and an editor for MDB databases with less features than professional software As a conclusion, MDB Viewer Plus makes the perfect choice if you require an application to handle existing Access databases. It's true that you can create databases as well, but you cannot expect it to perform jobs such as database analysis and maintenance. Get MDB Viewer Plus for FREE! RJ Delingale Getting a stable access database running always takes a little bit of work. See you again.Q: RxJava create and subscribe to a task and have it call the method I am using for handling events I am using RxJava and I have a very specific use case and I can't figure out how to solve it. I have an Observable that emits events, events in turn trigger calls to subscribers. I have several static methods which handle that, so that subscribers can register. How do I get the same observer to subscribe to two methods in one stack, that when called by the event return an observable? Example: class MyClass { private Observable innersubs =Observable.create(emitter-> emitter.onNext(new Event())); public Observable subscribeInner(Runnable r){ innersubs.subscribe(r,emitter->emitter.onError(new Exception("error"))); } public void register(Runnable r) { innersubs.subscribe(r,emitter->emitter.onNext(new Event())); } } The problem I am having is how do I get the register method to be called by the observer, when it fires. I have made this method observer in my class, so that it can be used in the register method. The problem is that this observer is not being notified of any events, as it is only subscribed to innersubs. How can this be done? A: So you want to get two different subscriptions to the same event? It's not currently possible in RxJava. You can use a Subject or BehaviorSubject that will re-emit the event as subscribed. If you
