I am wondering is it possible to query the current state of the data as I parse the file, rather than reloading the file after every change? Or should I look to C# to manipulate the data inside it? A: You can of course query the state of the data by using some kind of dictionary in your map, but I don't think you should do that. If you query the state you will have to load the whole file, which is something you don't want to do. As far as I understand, you want to query the state of the data without loading the whole file, in that case, you will have to use some kind of streaming. A few days ago the Ukrainian social media was full of the news about the appearance of the team around the URM-2M-23 heavy rocket. It seemed that these rockets are involved in the shelling of the army positions. The crew of the 24th team is well known. This is about 10-12 PTR-41 rockets specialists and the man that began training them was Anton Pustovalovsky. This is the link to his old website. According to the information of the Ukrainian side, the rockets were fired from the area of Avdiyivka. That night the parties exchanged fire and some shellings took place. One might think about the possibility that Russia might have directed the action in order to provide additional proof of the intention of the Ukrainian military to change the Novotolibiankosk Donbass front in the direction of the separatist forces.US soldiers march at the NATO summit in Chicago on May 20, 2012.
