Windows 32bit to black and white and playing with the camera's settings until I was satisfied. The images were taken with a Canon 5D Mark III, a 58 mm/1.8 lens (with moderate amounts of manual focus), and my Sony HLD-7C HDR flash. I made a video of the high ISO tests, so you can see the result of my tests: From ISO 100, I left my camera set to Auto ISO. From ISO 50, I left the ISO set to 100. From ISO 0, I left the ISO set to 50. Low ISO Test I used the same settings (with the same lens) as the high ISO tests, but I used a tripod to take the images. I set the ISO to 0 and took images with exposure times from 1/2 second to 12 seconds. I also took images with and without flash, in order to see the effect of the flash on the final images. I did not take any images with 1/2 and 1/5 of a second exposure times. ISO: 100, 1/2 sec, flash on. ISO: 100, 1/2 sec, flash off. ISO: 100, 3 sec, flash on. ISO: 100, 12 sec, flash on. ISO: 100, 10 sec, flash off. ISO: 50, 1/2 sec, flash on. ISO: 50, 1/2 sec, flash off. 9.0.0.1 Crack Plus Keygen Free working on Windows PC.Q: Keras - Return probabilities of class in prediction while training I'm training a model (LSTM) using Keras and I want to return probabilities along with my prediction. I have a text that looks like this: 1. hello how are you? 2. i love you! 3. i am going to come home now 4. i am going to eat something now [1,0.402674371745392,3,1,0.378539179432147] [2,0.49300836771061,1,0.090958533287306,0.445350518912629] [3,1,0,0,0] [4,0.46275029364589,1,0,0.435847834515184] The model takes this as input and outputs a sequence. The first and the last tokens of the sequence are id tokens, the others are the predictions. The id tokens are '1. Hello', '2. love you', '3. i am', '4. i am going' and the rest are the predictions. Since this is a text classification I'm wondering how can I get the probabilities of the results? Many thanks A: You can use `predict_classes` method to get probabilities of predictions. If your labels are in feature format, make sure you use `target` argument. Also, in Keras 1.2.0 or higher, you can use `squeeze` argument to just get the probabilities
