It works fine when I have it create the spreadsheet in a file in a particular folder, but I would like it to save the file to my database instead. I've created a "New..." database, and this is my connection string:
"jdbc:oracle:thin:@localhost:1521:orcl" This connects to the database without a problem, as I can query the database and get the results. I then create a DataSourceQuery to get the table I want to make the spreadsheet from, and then I write out the SQL query to generate the spreadsheet. It looks like this: `SELECT * FROM ADDRESSES` I know there are other pieces to the puzzle, but I've tried writing the whole thing with this connection string, and it doesn't work. I'm getting no error, but it doesn't work. The question is: what do I need to change to get BIRT to run this SQL file? A: The question is: what do I need to change to get BIRT to run this SQL file? I'd suggest that the root of the problem is the fact that you're not linking your query to any table. A query consists of a query name (select, group by, etc) and a data source query (or no data source query if it's a join or union). So your query would be something like `select * from your_table` and you'd connect to your data source using the connection string mentioned in the question. The point is that you should only need a query name and it would be a good idea to see

The inaugural Caribbean Television Challenge, kicked off in 2014, celebrated the fact that the Caribbean is now fully equipped with TV production capabilities. There is a lot of talent across the Caribbean who are determined to showcase their talents to the wider world. This year's CTV Awards presented at the Tiara Resort and Casino in Saint Lucia in July saw some new categories introduced. Whilst the winning programmes were announced at the Awards event, the videos are now available on the CTV Awards page for your viewing pleasure and can be shared across the globe via social media. The advent of electronic communication devices has led to the development of various services that allow users to wirelessly communicate between such devices. For example, when a user wishes to contact another user (or a computer system coupled to the wireless network, which may act as a "back-end" to the wireless network), a communication is typically setup, and 595f342e71
