Tip Google Picasa can be used as a free photo-sharing site, like Flickr. However, it only allows a few of your edited or original images to be uploaded to it, whereas Flickr allows you to have more than one account and upload all the images on one site. Also, in Flickr, you are able to rate your friends' photos, while with Picasa, you can only rate the photos themselves. This is a little more confusing for beginners to the tool. Canva: If you're looking for another free photo sharing website, then you should give Canva a try. It has many free templates that you can use to produce attractive collages and graphics. While Canva seems a little intimidating at first, the interface is relatively easy to understand. Coolers: This is another online image-sharing site that is free. One nice feature of Coolers is that it is compatible with other image-sharing sites. So, if you want to share your photos with friends on Facebook or Google+, you can do so with Coolers as well. Windows Live Gallery: One of the best free photo-sharing sites, Windows Live Gallery works with Windows Live, so you can also share your photos on social media sites like Facebook and Twitter. Another advantage is that you can also share your photos with other devices, such as smartphones and tablets. Share Photos Online There are a few different ways to share photos on the web. The first way is to upload the files to a photo-sharing site, like Flickr

Her job, like many others in the NHS, has been squeezed for years and now there is much concern about what will happen if the government's spending plans go ahead. It was not always this bad. For a nurse there has been a lot to celebrate. Funding for nurses has been protected and their pension benefits have been increased - though not as much as pay. In fact, the Royal College of Nursing (RCN) says nurses have actually suffered the biggest pay cuts over the last six years. We still have an excellent system, but we need to make it work effectively for the modern NHS Robert Francis, RCN: Key figures for 2012 It gets worse, says the RCN. Some staff are being transferred from the NHS to the private sector to make up the shortfall. There is even evidence of financial blacklisting. The RCN has uncovered in the last few months what it calls "a widespread practice" where the NHS has been sending staff "to another employer" after "short periods of time" for reasons that have not been made clear. "I worry about the morale of my colleagues, it's not good," says one nurse. "I worry that if the government cuts further it will push people who are struggling to get by, out of the system," says another. "If there are not more budget cuts, it might make my life more difficult." Cutting jobs, paying nurses less There are at least 7,000 nurses facing either redundancy or pay cuts - that is the number the Treasury has provided. Nurses numbers in England have not recovered to pre-recruitment levels since the mid-1990s, according to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the club of the richest countries. The OECD says that Britain has seen the fastest fall in nurse numbers of any major developed country in recent decades. But in absolute numbers, the UK's health service is still the second biggest provider of care in the world. It receives about a fifth of the country's total health spending, which averages £8,080 per person per year, according to the
