It has two flagella that are bundled to form a tubular morphology resembling a train of cars, and a hypha with all three cell types. These have been mistaken as scyphochaeta and amoeboid choanoflagellates respectively. History Cirsotrema was first described in 1955 by Margulis as Microsarcina gen. nov., and as the sister taxon to Plasmodiophora. In the later half of the 20th century, other species were found that can be distinguished from Cirsotrema, and the name was changed to be representative of a genus with a hypha, and the name Cirsotrema has remained. NFPAÂ .Rudolf Kempe Rudolf Kempe (; 4 September 1915 – 21 June 2000) was a German Lutheran theologian and church leader. He served as Bishop of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Bavaria (ELCB) from 1963 to 1980. Life and work Kempe was born in Danzig, capital city of the Free City of Danzig, in Prussia, then German Empire, now Gdańsk, Poland, on 4 September 1915. After passing an exam in law in 1933, he studied Protestant theology in Leipzig, Berlin and Jena. He wrote numerous German works, some of them intended for a general audience. In 1949, he began writing for the German and Polish language editions of the Book of Common Prayer, and in 1954, he was appointed as associate editor of the ELKB, the principal publishing organ of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Bavaria. From 1951 until his consecration in 1963, he served as an assistant in the ELKB's newly founded primary school in Munich. Between 1955 and 1960, he served as the pastor of the Ludwigshof Protestant Church in Friedberg. He was appointed as bishop in 1963 and ordained bishop on 24 January 1963. During his tenure as bishop, he was a proponent of his denomination's conversion to sola scriptura (Biblical Onlyism) and opposed the ecumenical movement. In an article titled "We Have No Place in the Protestant Churches", written for the German Catholic, Kempe harshly criticised fellow Protestants and their ecumenical endeavours. This stance saw the ELCB marginalized in the
